Attorney Tells Captors He's Ready To 'Deal'; Message Found Under Stone.

(By International News Service)
NEW ROCHELLE, N. Y.—A one-time bootlegger and recent racetrack plunger who lost so heavily that he said he would "do anything for money" was sought today in connection with the apparent kidnaping of 12-year-old Peter Levine for whom ransom of $50,000 reportedly had been asked.

There was $22,000—all that the missing boy's father, Murray Levine, a Manhattan lawyer, could raise—ready for "those who hold my boy" if the lad is returned, and there was an intermediary ready to negotiate, but no word came to the Levine home.

Last to See Him.

Thursday afternoon Peter met a schoolmate to play ball but told his chum:

"I've got to go across the street to a store."

The schoolmate did not see him again, Peter did not return home and local store owners said he had not been in of late.

When a woman came and "no Peter," his worried parents telephoned Mrs. Levine.

Mrs. Levine was reported to have found under the stone a note which asserted that Peter had been kidnapped and would be held for $50,000 ransom.

The ransom note brought G-men into the case to assist local police but at the request of Levine, both forces announced they would hold off to permit him an opportunity to contact the kidnappers.

Wide-spread Search.

Despite their public protestations of "laying off the case," the G-men and police nevertheless were in the thick of it today conducting a county-wide search for the bootlegger who talked so readily after he had dropped a fortune.

Final action will be taken on Monday by the Mansfield City Council to continue the present supervision of the city's sewage treatment plant tonight when council meets in regular session.

The measure, given first and second readings in the past two weeks, includes the renewal of an ordinance creating positions and fixing the salaries of sewage plant employees, another authorizing the employment of a plant technician and a third measure calling for the transfer of $1,500 to pay the salary of the technical supervisor for one year.

Other legislation up for consideration will be a measure authorizing Service-Safety Director Tracy C. Styer to enter into a contract the General Hospital staff physicians for care of indigent patients for the year. The sum, to be paid in 12 equal monthly installments amounts to $4,000, or $1,000 less than was paid for the same service last year.

Swedish Film Star, Stokowski Sip Tea in Secret in Tiny Italian Village.

(Copyright, 1938)

ROME—Under blue Italian skies, in the romantic little village of Ravello, Greta Garbo and Leopold Stokowski were found on holiday today.

Each day, it was learned, the famous Swedish film star and the orchestra conductor with the famed hands meet for tea on a balcony of the old Hotel Bellevue and gaze down on the majestic view of the blue Bay of Amalfi.

For days, while Italy, gay in carnival time, hummed with rumors, Miss Garbo and Stokowski kept their whereabouts a secret.

But today Dino Cursio, proprietor of the Bellevue, proudly related the whole story over the telephone.

"Mr. Stokowski came here on Feb. 17, and made arrangements for his stay," said Cursio.

He nestles on a crag 300 feet above the sea.

"Mr. Stokowski and Miss Garbo came to the hotel each afternoon for tea. They kept strictly to themselves, and walk about Ravello."

Roosevelt Advisor Holds U. S. Policies Stalemate Recovery

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON—Bernard M. Baruch, New York financier and a close adviser of President Roosevelt, attacked government competition today as a "violation of an essential of recovery" and challenged the administration to enforce anti-trust laws by direct action.

Testifying for the second day before the senate unemployment and relief committee, Baruch suggested that production and marketing of agricultural products be unshackled. He described the new farm bill as "an untried plan of bureaucratic control of the individual freedom and initiative of 6,000,000 farmers."

CITY TO GET NEW $150,000 MOVIE HOUSE

Constant Circuit to Erect Theater at South Park And Diamond Streets.

WORK STARTS NEXT WEEK

Building Seating 1,400 on One Floor, Expected to Be Completed in July.

Work will begin next week on a new $150,000 theater which will be constructed at the corner of South Park and Diamond streets by the Constant Circuit of theaters, independent operators of a chain of theaters in Ohio and West Virginia, A. G. Constant, president of the firm, announced today.

General contract for building the theater has been let to J. W. Nass, Mansfield contractor, and the razing of the old building and excavation will be done by the Mansfield Asphalt and Paving company. Only Mansfield labor will be employed on the project, Constant said.

Landmark to Be Razed.

The work of tearing down the old building, one of the landmarks of the city, which has housed a church, a factory and a saloon, and in recent years a garage, will get under way the first of next week.

Constant, who is a native of Steubenville, said all contracts called for a time limit of five months, but he expects to be able to open the theater early in July.

The plans call for a theater that will be strictly modern, with the latest equipment in air conditioning and sound. It will have 1,100 seats, all on one floor, and the seats themselves will be inner sprung with molinar upholstery.

Constant added there will be a small stage, since it is not being built for vaudeville, he said.

Building 200-Foot Deep.

The building will be 60 feet wide, facing South Park street, by 200 feet. The theater proper will be 60 by 145, while the lobby will be 22 by 40. The building will have two small shops on 20 seats, all on one floor, and the seats themselves will be inner sprung with molinar upholstery.

Constant said his company has taken a long term lease on the ground which is owned by Carl H. Stander, Mansfield paving contractor. The terms of the lease were not made public. It was awarded to the city.

HITS 'DISGRACE'

Duffy Raps Failure to Correct Ohio Parole, Penal System.

CELINA—(UP)—The state's parole and penal system was termed "a disgrace" by Attorney General Herbert S. Duffy, who recently directed a grand jury investigation of prisons, in a talk before American Legion members here last night.

"In spite of our recommendation to the parole board, no action has been taken," Duffy said.

"There is no parallel in the United States to Ohio's penal system."

He cited four-man cells in Ohio penitentiary, inadequate medical and dental care of prisoners, and sale of alcohol and narcotics to prisoners in support of his charges.

"No one would treat a dog like these prisoners are treated," he said.

Duffy said his investigation had to be paid for out of funds for his office, which were inadequate.

March Lamb Scampers In, Spring Can't Be So Far Off

Rise In Temperature on Way, Sun Beams Brightest; Looks Like We've Little to Fear From Lion.

If you heard a timid, friendly little bleat just outside your window today, it would be the March lamb, who came scampering through the new page on the calendar.

In fact there was a bit of a skip and a jump to the scampers, as though spring were in the air, despite a temperature of 35 at noon.

February made every attempt to usher in a lion instead of a lamb, closing with snow, wind and slippery streets. Today the March sun beamed its brightest.

Continued fair and warmer is predicted for tonight and cloudy, rain and warmer temperatures tomorrow.

The highest temperature in the preceding 24 hours was 28, making an average of 21.5 for the period, which was seven degrees below the 13-year average for Feb. 28.

21 Days to Spring.

But while Mansfielders basked in the sunshine of the first day of March, they dropped to the ground the time honored prophecy that when March comes in like a lion, it will go out like a lion. But there is comfort in the thought that spring is only 21 days away, and even though the March lion does roar a bit after that, it is never a very sustained or savage roar.

With an unusually mild winter on the wane, it is a pretty safe guess that there is little to fear from the March lion.

But Ohio was fortunate, for the March lion roared his way across the northeastern states in a 50-mile race and brought them the severest weather of the winter.

Snow blanketed upstate New York and New England, while temperatures dropped to the zero mark. In Massachusetts the cold took two lives and property damage was heavy in the storm area. The weather bureau promised moderation for these states today.

TEACHERS HIT MOVE TO KILL TAX ON SALES

Mansfield Association Urges Parents to Help Retain 3 Per Cent Levy.

CITES LOSS TO SCHOOLS

Begin Counter Drive Against Moved Launched by Anti-Sales Tax League.

The Mansfield City Teachers' association joined today in a campaign against repeal of the state sales tax from which Mansfield schools get approximately $195,000 a year for operating expenses.

Robert Davis, teacher at Hedges Junior high school and president of the association, said bulletins had been distributed to all teachers in the city's schools, requesting them to contact parents and urge that the sales tax be retained.

Would Put Issue On Ballot.

The teachers' action will be taken as a counter campaign to a drive for repeal of the sales tax being conducted by the Anti-Sales Tax League of Ohio, organized at Akron in January by Dr. Oscar Hayes. The Anti-Sales league seeks to have the proposed repeal of the tax placed before the voters at the November election.

"We consider it a matter of educating the public to the benefits of the sales tax and telling parents what the loss of it would mean to the schools," Davis said today.

"It requires some $375,000 a year to pay teachers and general operating expenses in the Mansfield schools, and more than half of that amount would be wiped out by repeal of the sales tax," he explained.

Schools Get Nearly Half.

Schools in Ohio obtained $23,000,000 from the retail sales tax last year, while about $25,000,000 in sales tax receipts went to local governments and for relief.

Dr. Hayes, originator of the anti-sales tax movement, challenged Paul W. Williams, secretary-manager of the Mansfield Chamber of Commerce, to a public debate on the issue of sales tax repeal two weeks ago.

The challenge followed the publication of a bulletin by the Chamber of Commerce opposing repeal of the tax.

Protests against Dr. Hayes' organization have also brought challenges to debate to E. L. Bowsher, superintendent of Toledo schools; E. N. Dietrich, state director of education, and other school leaders throughout the state.

Dr. Hayes argues that the sales tax bill was passed only as a temporary measure and that it is crippling the public buying power by $52,000,000 annually the amount collected in tax each year.

He said more than 50,000 names have been obtained on petitions being circulated over the state to have the proposed amendment placed on the ballot. "The law requires 350,000 signatures to put the issue before the people."

Governor, Facing Most Serious Crisis, Waits 'Verdict' On Graft Probe After Speech Defending Honesty; Orders Engineer Fired For Testimony.

COLUMBUS—(UP)—A resolution postponing adjournment of the Ohio legislature, technically set for Feb. 28, until March 28 was introduced in the house today by Rep. W. P. Van Ness, R., Champaign county.

CLEVELAND—(INS)—Petitions asking removal of Governor Davey have been drawn up here, but they have not yet been printed for general circulation, William Gordon, attorney and former Democratic congressman, who said he had been retained to draw up the petitions, asserted today.

COLUMBUS—Gov. Martin L. Davey came today to perhaps the most serious crisis in his political career.

Ostensibly desirous of a third term which might reflect him as presidential timber in 1940, Ohio's chief executive fought ferociously to quell a movement designed, he said, to destroy him politically.

Power to stop the movement—a senate investigation of alleged graft in the state government—lay in the hands of the house of representatives. And to the house the governor appealed, in effect, for help.

As the house prepared to act on a senate-approved resolution which would continue the two-month-old investigation indefinitely, Governor Davey asked for a "fair inquiry."

Terminating the senate investigation a "Russian inquiry" to which I do everlastingly object," the governor told the house of representatives.

"You may go along with that if you wish, but God pity America if that is to be the fate of our government and public officials."

Everything else in the legislature was overshadowed by the question of continuing the inquiry, which has produced sensational testimony and charges of graft, corruption and mismanagement.

LONDON—(INS)—Mrs. Frances Ross, 19, Ashland, awaited sentence today after a common pleas court jury found her guilty of aiding livestock rustlers in a raid on a central Ohio ranch. The charges were breaking and entering and grand larceny.

Ross, also of Ashland, is serving an Ohio penitentiary term for the theft of sheep from the Edward Turner ranch, near Columbus.

Pershing Fights On, Doctors See Recovery Chance

TUCSON, Ariz.—(AP)—Gen. John J. Pershing, who didn't know how to surrender—even to death—held on to gained ground today and physicians renewed hope that he might win his campaign against illness.

In a rally beginning Sunday noon the fighting World War commander had overcome the inability to swallow—and therefore to take food by the mouth—thrown off much of the poison a kidney failure left in his blood stream, and regained full consciousness.

Over 600 no longer was necessary. His heart, though badly damaged, was regular, his pulse competent. He slept a natural sleep.

Late yesterday, a day of remarkable gains, Pershing called for orange juice. It was the first food he had requested in four days and the first he had been able to swallow.

"The outlook is quite promising," said Dr. Roland Davidson, the 77-year-old general private physician. "I am distinctly encouraged even though I realize his condition is still critical."

BLACKSHIRTS GET READY TO ACT IN CRISIS

Helmwehr Reorganizes While Vienna Hears 80,000 Nazis Prepare For Action.

(By Associated Press) GRAZ, Austria—Veterans of Austria's disbanded army, the Helmwehr, decided today to revive their organization to meet what they regarded as a Nazi menace to Austria's independence.

Helmwehr blackshirt leaders made their decision in a conference here as the Austrian army and police stood by for instant action after balking plans of Nazi brownshirts for a march on Vienna.

Duce Sends Envoy.

Austrian fatherland front circles reported meanwhile that Premier Benito Mussolini of Italy had sent a special envoy to Chancellor Kurt Schuschnigg with the assurance that Italy, as in the past, upholds the independence of Austria. The Fascist leaders met while Nazi headquarters was in a continuous state of preparedness for action. Eighty thousand Nazis were said to be in uniform, awaiting a call to action.

It was disclosed that the Helmwehr did not plan immediate revival of military features of its organization, which once was the private army of Prince Ernst Rudiger von Starhemberg.

The blackshirts said they would confine themselves at present to "energetic political action."

Starhemberg, however, mooning about with his brain, the famous Viennese actress, Nora Gregor, apparently played no part in the Helmwehr action.

Schuschnigg's parliament declaration affirming Austrian independence last Thursday cooled Nazi hopes of union with Germany and precipitated street demonstrations and plans for the march on Vienna.

DISBANDED IN 1936

Organized by Starhemberg to fight Nazis and Socialists, the Helmwehr was ordered disbanded in October, 1936. The dissolution order, issued by Chancellor Schuschnigg, also applied to the chancellors own Catholic militia.

Shortly before, Helmwehr strength was estimated at 14,000 men, with 140,000 reserves.

Always friendly to Mussolini, the price had been a foe at Anschluss (Union) with Germany.

Short Story: A 12-year-old boy invited on seeing Manager William Dvorak at the Madison theater the other day and handed him 55 cents, saying only "I owe you this." Curious, Dvorak asked him what for, and the youngster said: "I sneaked into your theater in the crowds when Ted Lewis was here. There were about 12 of us who got in for nothing. But since I've had a chance to think about it, I'm ashamed. I hated like the dickens to tell you about it—but I guess it's always kinda hard to admit you're wrong." He is a newboy and earns his own money by selling papers.

It isn't often that a newspaper is praised for making a typographical error, but that is what happened when the subject of Rev. E. G. Corwin's sermon was changed by one little letter. The subject was "The Solution to Loneliness," but in Saturday's church page it appeared as "The Solution to Loveliness," when a "v" dropped into a line of type instead of an "n." In speaking of it in his pulpit, Rev. Corwin said: "I wish that the world might be thus easily changed, and that with the substitution of one little letter, loneliness might become loveliness."

"Because of the numerous contacts," Rehder said, "it is advisable that all persons be immunized for the smallpox virus."

Health authorities reported that the new cases of the disease brings the total to 93 taken ill in the county since the first outbreak here Jan. 14. No new cases have been reported in Mansfield in the past 24 hours and four persons, all in the city, were released from quarantine. INSTITUTE TOLD CHINA CAN WIN UNLESS JAPS GET OUTSIDE AID

A China that has been awakened in the past 15 years to the realization that it must unite to withstand the attacks of the Japanese was pictured last night at Mansfield Senior high school by Dr. Harry E. Love, professor at Cornell University.

Dr. Love spoke on "The Rise of Nationalism in China" before an audience of about 500 persons. He was the fourth lecturer to appear in Mansfield in the Institute of International Understanding sponsored by the Rotary and University clubs.

Asserting that it is impossible to predict the outcome of the Japanese conflict, Dr. Love said China has a good chance to win out in the war unless Japan obtains some outside financial help.

Comparing the strength of the two countries, he pointed out that Japan has a larger trained army, but that China has far greater manpower, more resources and is in a better financial condition than Japan.

"The Japanese are burdening themselves with debt in order to continue the war," he said, "and it's only a matter of time until they will have to win or withdraw and rebuild their national finances."

Tracing the development of the Chinese nation through the many centuries of its existence, Dr. Love said the reformation of the people was actually begun by Gen. Sun Yat-Sen, who he described as the "Chinese George Washington."

The Chinese people, aroused under the leadership of the noted general, have welcomed ideas from other civilized countries and have developed a strong feeling of nationalism, Dr. Love said.

Much of the financial backing of the Chinese during their present war with Japan has come from the United States, he explained. He said that the Chinese will have to submit to Japanese rule, the Chinese in foreign lands have sent money home to assist in carrying on the war against invasion, he said.

The Japanese have waged their war under the guise of defending China from Communism, but if Communism ever dominates China, it will be due to the efforts of the Japs, he predicted.

Dr. Love for several years was

Federal Court Opens Hearing In $100,000 Heart Balm Suit Against Minister.

(By Associated Press) STEUBENVILLE — Cora Lillian Burnham's $100,000 breach of promise suit against Rev. Harold C. Zeis was called for trial today in federal court.

The divorce charges that Mr. Zeis, 41-year-old rector of St. Paul's Episcopal church here, agreed 10 years ago to marry her, but repudiated the agreement in 1935 and married Mrs. A. B. Sharpe, Steubenville society leader.

Mr. Zeis, in an answer to the suit filed two years ago, contended he and Miss Burnham "mutually agreed to release each other from the obligation of said agreement to marry" and that he married Mrs. Sharpe "in full reliance upon the agreement."

It was while the rector was on an European tour that he wrote a letter addressing her as "My Darling Wife," Miss Burnham contended.

Dated "On Shipboard, July 29, 1935," she contended he wrote: "Seems I can feel your love coming over the miles. I adore you. You'll always love me, won't you? You are my everything. We'll go to Europe on our honeymoon, or else—the first one was wonderful but not half as important as the second."

ADMITS 'GIFTS'

McGee, on Stand in Racket Trial Admits $1,500 Paid.

CLEVELAND — (INS) — John E. McGee, head of the Laborers' District Council, returned to the witness stand today to continue his defense against charges of extortion.

McGee and Don A. Campbell, president of the painters' district council, are being tried jointly on charges of extorting $1,200 from Vernon Stoffer, proprietor of a restaurant chain.

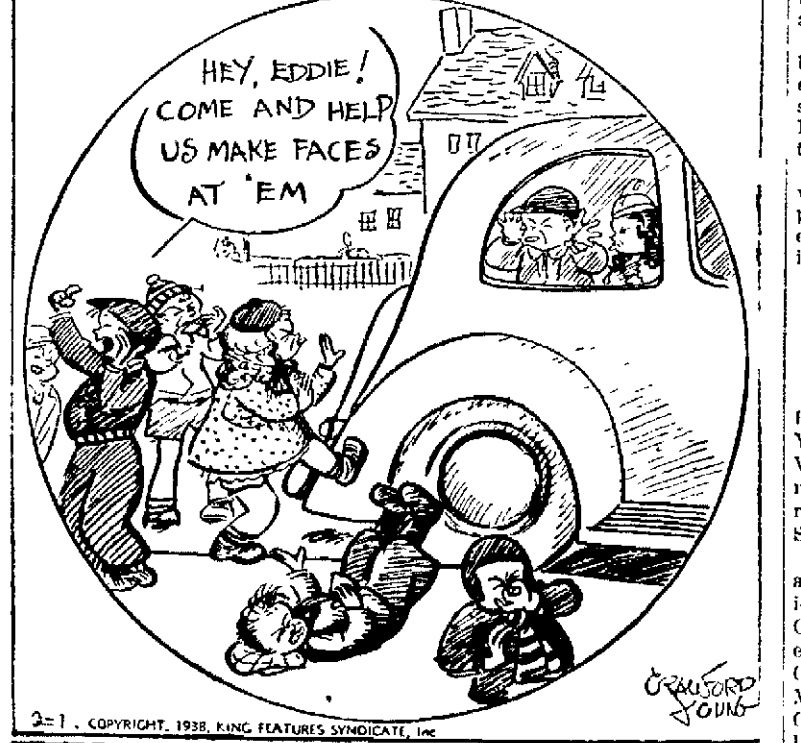

In direct examination McGee said he had received gifts of $1,500 from four window cleaning companies here. The gifts, he testified, were for his obtaining CWA contracts for the companies to wash windows of 88 public school buildings. He obtained the work, he said, when the companies agreed to organization of the employees.

The money received, McGee asserted, was deposited to the account of the Building Service Employees union, of which he was organizer.

Administration Politicos See Chance of Loss in Illinois Voting in 6 Weeks.

(By International News Service) WASHINGTON — Administration politicians are more worried than they care to admit over the increasing bitterness of Democratic factional strife in half a dozen states that are highly important to the New Deal.

The principal "sore spots" are in Illinois, Pennsylvania, Indiana and Kentucky — although Democratic bickering prevails in other states as well—in Ohio, New York, and California.

The Illinois primary is only a matter of six weeks away. The withdrawal of Senator William H. Dieterich has only served to intensify the war between the Kelly-Nash machine in Chicago and the numerous organization of Gov. Henry Horner. The Chicago organization is backing District Attorney Michael Igoe for the senatorial nomination, and Horner is supporting Rep. Scott Lucas, a two-term congressman and prominent Legionnaire.

Battle In November.

Whoever wins on April 12 will have a battle in November, not only from the Republicans, but from the other Democratic camp. Democratic disaffection, on any considerable scale might well send a Republican senator to Washington next fall.

In Indiana, the McNutt-Townsend organization is preparing to deny a renomination to Senator Frederick Van Nuys, who has been at odds with the administration on numerous occasions. Van Nuys already has threatened, if denied renomination, to run as an independent, and in that case a divided Democratic vote might result in Republican victory. Quick to scent the possibility, the veteran Senator "Jim" Watson has declared himself for the Republican nomination, notwithstanding his 78 years.

The Pennsylvania situation is worrying the White House, too. The state committee's hand-picked Democratic slate to go into the May 17 primary, Charles A. Jones for governor, and Gov. George H. Earle for senator, left many sore spots. The Lewis candidate, Lieut. Gov. Thomas Kennedy, who also is secretary-treasurer of the United Mine Workers, a place on the state Lewis is preparing to run Kennedy for the gubernatorial nomination anyway, and if he can muster the support of his CIO unions he may figure in a major upset CIO leaders claim upward of 800,000 votes in Pennsylvania between the miners, the steel workers, and other Lewis-affiliated unions.

300 'PRINTED'

Junior Red Cross Begins Work Among Shelby Pupils.

Fingerprinting of county school children began today at Shelby high school, where the Junior Red Cross students, working next fingerprinting instructions from the Shelby police department, took the prints of about 300 students.

Permission slips were being distributed in Shelby schools and at Madison township high school today, to be signed by parents, giving their permission for the fingerprinting.

During the week every student in county schools will be given identification cards, which will be filled out and given to the parents if the parents are willing to have their children fingerprinted. Each card bears a place for name and address and age, and a space for the print of the index finger of each child.

The project is being carried out by Junior Red Cross, for the purpose of identification of school children in case of accident, kidnapping, loss of memory or disaster. A full identification card will be filed in the civilian department of the identification bureau at Washington, and the Mansfield bureau.

The fingerprinting is being done by a small group of students from each school, who will be given instructions by Police Chief Mendel K. Bates and E. C. Fuller, head of the Mansfield Identification bureau. Whether Mansfield city school will take part in the project depends upon action of the board of education at the next regular meeting.

The Great Game of Politics

—By FRANK R. KENT

Abandonment.

THE CHARGE has been made again and again against the administration—and with convincing evidence—that it has lost control of the federal finances; that through book-keeping jugglery it has made it impossible to obtain accurate information of the federal fiscal situation; that it does not know what it is doing nor where it is going. That has been true since the middle of 1933; it has been increasingly true every following year, and it is most appallingly true today.

NO ONE who recalls or rereads Mr. Roosevelt's budgetary and financial pronouncements—beginning with his solemn 1932 indictment of the deficits created by his predecessor and continuing with his annual messages urging retrenchment and promising a balanced budget—can fail to be impressed with the fact that the contrast between his promises and his performances is complete. In all our history there never was a president whose deeds so denied his words: whose promises were so swiftly and completely disregarded. For the fourth successive time the budget estimates submitted by him to congress have fallen to pieces. The situation which in January he pictured in his message has turned out to be misleading and the hopes he held out false.

A FEW months ago the whole administration emphasis was on economy. It was agreed that unless an approximate adjustment of income to outgo were effected there would be serious trouble. The president was declared to be deeply in earnest, resolutely determined that expenses had to be pruned. Today his estimates have mentioned a world, no one so much as the phrase "balance the budget" is used only to get a laugh. In brief, there literally is no one in the administration now, from the president down, who seems to have even an academic interest in saving.

OF COURSE, the excuse is—first, that the business slump, with the increase in unemployment, has necessitated an additional appropriation of $250,000,000 for relief; second, that the threatening state of foreign affairs makes essential a largely increased appropriation for national defense. These things, it is said, make it impossible for the president to balance the budget next year, as he had hoped, and have upset his calculations. Perhaps so, but certainly these things have not made it necessary to relax all effort and financially cut the country adrift. They have not made it necessary to abandon even the pretense of retrenchment and acquiesce in, or at least permit, various other schemes for increasing the governmental expenses. They haven't made it necessary to stop even thinking about economy; they haven't made it necessary to accept without even pointing it out to the people, the sinking of the treasury still deeper into the mire of national insolvency.

ON THE contrary, it would be natural to think that the additional appropriations for relief and national defense would insure an increased energy upon the part of the president to cut. It would seem that these things would make him insist that even the most essential Federal service be re-examined in order to economize; that he would lay down the law to his department heads, that he would meet the new outlays with an equivalent reduction elsewhere in the budget. It would seem that that was the only possible course for a man who believed what he so often has said. But this he not only has not done—he has not even tried. Quite clearly, he isn't trying and apparently he will not try. For example, he will not even consider changing the tremendously wasteful and utterly inefficient WPA system of relief to the far more effective and vastly less expensive system of returning the administration of relief to the local communities.

FOR ANOTHER example, he is determined to jam through his own departmental reorganization bill, for which not even the clat of economy is made, sweeping aside Senator Byrd's reorganization ideas, which would save $100,000,000 a year. Instead, Mr. Roosevelt signed, without it, is believed, reading it, the new farm bill, which will cost in unnecessary subsidies upward of a billion a year—signed it, knowing that no way of raising the money had been provided. Further, he has just sent to the congress the report of an administration committee which recommends federal grants of nearly a billion dollars to the states during the next six years to aid in school education—a proposal bad in principle as well as ruinously expensive. Little increases as well as big go through or are proposed with no thought of protest—little items such as an additional $50,000 to Mr. Harold Ickes for the creation of a new "publicity department" in spite of the fact that the government is literally crawling now with highly paid press agents and publicity directors.

THE SIMPLE FACT is that, wholly apart from relief and the navy, this congress will greatly increase the cost of government by appropriating for purposes not in the president's January budget calculations at all. Some of this, like the farm bill, the president will have himself urged, and none of it will be sought to prevent. In other words, he isn't trying. Nor is anyone else in his administration. The economy drive has completely petered out. It isn't even talked about in the White House "inner circle." Is it any wonder that the few clear-headed men in the administration, with contacts close enough to know the facts, are frightened and dismayed at what they see happening and what they think is going to happen? Neither the smiling press-conference urbanity of the president nor the ceaseless propaganda that flows from the departmental disguises from them the fact that he is really a badly confused man, pulled first one way and then another by the third-rate fellows who are his intimate advisers.

Hollywood Speaks—

—By ROBBIN COONS

HOLLYWOOD—Unreel parade: Ray Bolger, the rubber-legged dancing comedian, is becoming a cutting-room star. He's out of "The Girl of the Golden West" since the sneak preview because they figured his dance stopped the story. . . . He was almost ousted from "Rosalie" too. . . . But there's a boy who's long to climb big when he gets the part—if the part stays in.

Mary Astor tells about the curious but probably natural reaction of a movie-bred child to her first glimpse of a stage performance. . . . She took daughter Margilyn to see the Ballet Russe. "The little girl exclaimed excitedly as the first curtain rose: 'Oh, Mamma—they look like real people!'"

Wonder what Claire Trevor was thinking at the preview of Annabella's first Hollywood picture? . . . Because Annabella looks like Trevor—with a French accent. . . . Arleen Whelan, a few years ago a beauty-shop girl and maid, is all but had the role of Scarlett O'Hara but Selznick would not give it unless Zannek would contract, which Zannek wouldn't. . . . Allen's next picture is "Kidnaped"—and she's been improving so much that they're re-shooting the earlier sequences so her work will match her later dramatic stride. . . . Al Walker, directing this number, is a fairly among directors. . . . He does all kinds of films, taking on an "epic" like "The House of Rothschild," then turning to a lovely "B" and doing the same kind of job. . . . Just does what he's given to do, whether it's super-serious, or just colossal, or just a quickie. . . . W. S. Van Dyke is another. . . . At least he's a little fed up on "epics" at present, what with "Marie Antoinette." . . . "Epics," said he, "are just a lot of grief and the costumes." . . . With so many wigs and so much elaborate apparel, there's constant repair work to hold things up. . . . And being held up is not one of the colonel's pleasures.

FHA REVISIONS PROVIDE RURAL BUILDING PLAN

Construction Under $2,500 Permitted in Marginal, Suburban Areas.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Provision of government-insured financing for extremely low-priced residential construction in suburban, rural, and marginal areas adjacent to cities and towns is contained in amendments to the National Housing act, signed by the president on February 3. Federal Housing Administrator Stewart McDonald announced recently. These provisions are now a part of the modernization credit plan. Briefly, this part of the modernization credit plan now allows for the construction of residential properties up to $2,500, provided certain conditions are met. Consistent with every other phase of its operation, the Housing administration has set up a system of eligibility requirements which this type of construction must meet. While not rigid, these requirements will tend to produce a more desirable type of structure and generally conform to the Federal Housing administration's standards and conditions. The general requirements are as follows:

The lot upon which the structure is to be built must not be less than 4,000 square feet with a minimum frontage of not less than 40 feet. In areas where public water and sewerage facilities are available, 7,500 square feet minimum in cases where public water and private sewer facilities (cesspool or septic tank) are utilized; 20,000 square feet minimum where neither are available. Floor areas must not be less than 350 square feet. There must be at least one window in every habitable room. Bathroom and running water are obligatory where public water supply is available; septic tanks, driven or dug wells where water and sewer are not available.

These loans may be repaid in equal monthly installments over periods up to 10 years and 1 month.

RESISTS WATER

Aluminum paint has high resistance to water penetration, is, therefore, an excellent paint to use for exterior priming or for any other place where a surface needs such protection. If it is possible within the building budget to have the backs of all clapboards or other wood wall covering painted before erection, it will prolong the life of the outside paint.

When a recreation room is being planned in the basement of a new home, windows can be designed to give more than the usual amount of sunlight. They may be made extra large and the top of the window should be as close to the ceiling as possible.

MUST BE DRIED

When buying lumber for building, great care should be taken to ascertain the percentage of moisture it contains. If the content is high, the lumber is not ready for use.

All lumber will shrink, but lumber that has not been properly dried will shrink excessively and may cause trouble from twisting and warping. The importance of dry lumber cannot be overemphasized.

COLOR SEEN AS BUSINESS AID

Distinctive Shades Found to Attract Customers, Shop Owners Learn.

NEW YORK—That store fronts, painted in bright, definite colors, add distinction to the shop within and are easily remembered by passersby, is being recognized more and more by Manhattan merchants. A recent informal survey reveals this fact and demonstrates that certain businesses tend to adopt characteristic color schemes which subtly suggest some attribute of their work. Shop owners are discovering that an attractive paint scheme is little, if any, more expensive than the ordinary freshening-up job and that it can often be made to yield gratifying returns.

Bakeries, for example, are being made to suggest cleanliness by painting exterior surfaces white accented by a bright modern note of green, blue, red or yellow. Painting the interior white and gray provides a neutral, yet cheery setting for the golden yellow loaves of bread and the brightly-colored cakes and pastries.

Hardware stores, on the other hand, need strong colors for their exteriors—colors such as red and blue. The front of one small shop was made to stand out from a long row of others by using vermilion, with black as the trim. The same scheme introduced indoors made a smart, vigorous background for displaying the hardware.

It is the aim of the up-to-date drug store to suggest both integrity of materials and an inviting hospitality to the patron who frequents the soda and lunch counter. Among the newest color schemes, white predominates with accents of gray, light yellow, blue or orange-red.

SEATTLE, Wash. — (INS) — Victor Hugo's immortal character, Jean Valjean, came to life here when 21-year-old Charles Atkins was sentenced to a maximum of 20 years in the state penitentiary for taking 29 cents and a gun from an elderly man. Superior Judge Roger J. Meakin said, "It is not the amount taken that is important. It is the fact that he put another man's life in jeopardy."

PERSONAL TAX PAYING BEGINS

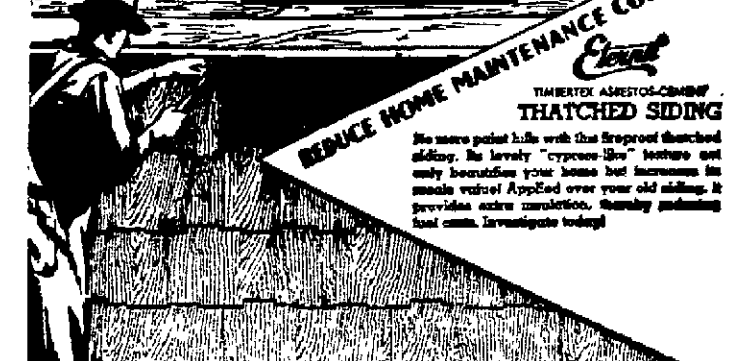

Auditor Station—Assistant in Lobby to Aid Taxpayers.

With the opening of the period for collecting first-half personal and classified taxes, a representative of the county auditor's office was stationed in the courthouse lobby today to help taxpayers in listing their property.

Blanks are available at the auditor's office or at any bank in the county, Auditor Norman L. Wolfe said. About 6,500 persons and concerns in the county must pay their personal property taxes by April 1 to avoid penalty, since the state law permits no extension of time for payment.

If more convenient, property listings and checks in payment of taxes may be mailed to the county treasurer before April 1, Wolfe said.

Indirect Lights Finding Favor In Modern Dwelling

Indirect lighting is gaining favor day by day. The indirect light grows from wall and ceiling fixtures to lamps, and now the third method has taken the lead. All have their uses, and possibly a combination of the three will be the ideal arrangement. In the purely utilitarian rooms, such as the kitchen, laundry, utility room, etc., ceiling lights for general illumination will stay. In special places, like over the kitchen sink, possibly some in indirect or semi-indirect lighting may ultimately become standard, but where work is to be done a strong direct light will be wanted.

In the living room, library, and other rooms of general social use a combination of lamps and indirect lighting will be used. Some general illumination will be needed, and the softness of indirect light will best serve this purpose. For reading and for ordinary home use lamps are preferable.

MIRROR SHELVES
Recessed mirrored shelves in a small dining room are both decorative and useful and add a modern touch. Black, blue, or roan-tinted glass is particularly effective.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS GIVE TIMELY TIPS FOR HOME OWNERS

Q. I have built a new home, and there are a lot of tree stumps on the ground. What is the simplest method of removing them?
A. If these stumps are not too large, the simplest method is to dig around them and cut them out with an ax. They can be pulled out with a block and tackle using horse or tractor, or contractors will be found who have a stump puller which can remove fairly large-sized stumps. If the stumps are very large, they may have to be dynamited. This should not be done by an amateur but should be handled by a qualified man, and care should be taken to protect nearby structures against flying pieces of the stump.

Q. What stain is most satisfactory for use on plaster?
A. Staining of plaster is not a very common practice, but when it is done an oil stain will most likely give the best results. If the stained effect is desired to imitate wood or wood panelling, this may be done quite successfully by painting. The paint, while still wet, is combed, dragged, or otherwise figured in imitation of natural-wood grainings. When dry, the work may be finished by waxing or varnishing.

MATERIALS FOR BATHROOM USE

In selecting materials for the bathroom, those with water-resisting qualities should be used. For the floor, ceramic tile, asphalt tile, cork tile or linoleum can be used to advantage. For the walls, tile, tile wall boards, linoleum, structural glass, waterproofed wallpaper, metal bonds to stimulate tile, and numerous other synthetic materials are available.

GALILEE TOMBS OF 2ND CENTURY ARE EXPLORED

Jewish Catacombs Linked to Beth-Shearim; Doors Found In Working Order.

(By United Press)

HAIFA—A second century underground Jewish cemetery, with doors which still revolve in their sockets and walls painted with ships, animals, human figures and geometrical designs, has been discovered by the Jewish Palestine Exploration Society cut into the rock of Sheikh Abreik hill.

The hill is in western Galilee overlooking the valley of Jezreel, and commands the crossing of two ancient roads, one from the Plain of Acre to the valley of Jezreel, and the other from Galilee to Samaria.

Remains of buildings and mosaic pavements, architectural fragments, pots, herds and coins dating from the 1st to the 4th centuries A. D. showed that a large settlement existed on the hill of the Roman period.

The excavations have confirmed the belief that the cemetery was the necropolis of the town of Beth-Shearim, mentioned frequently in Talmudic sources as a central cemetery for the Jews of Palestine and Diaspora, during the first centuries after the destruction of the Second Temple.

10 Catacombs Excavated.

For two seasons the work of excavation went on from October, 1936, to January, 1937, and from April to November, 1937. Four catacombs were excavated on the western slope of Sheikh Abreik hill and six others on a hill to the northwest.

The first catacomb consists of an open corridor, 26 yards long, cut into the rock. It leads into several halls. The doors into these halls are well preserved and several of them still revolve in their sockets. The halls contain some 400 burial places, and in several tombs skeletons were found, still in their original positions. Only in one pit were the remains of a wooden coffin clearly distinguishable.

There were only slight traces of wood and iron, or bronze nails and corner fittings from wooden coffins, as well as traces of bones, showing that secondary burials were practiced at Beth-Shearim. Archaeologists believe that wooden coffins were used to carry bodies from other towns and sometimes from distant countries. The tombs and walls are decorated with paintings, drawings and relief work, with ancient Jewish themes prominent. Most of the halls contain several chambers, divided by arches supported on columns. An unusual feature of one catacomb is a square courtyard, with a beautiful staircase, colored mosaic pavement and arched doorways.

PRISON HELPFUL TO SONG WRITER

Six Years Give Ex-Milkman Chance to Develop Talent As a Composer.

(By United Press)

SAN QUENTIN, Cal.—Bernard J. "Pat" Malone, former Oakland milkman, recently released from San Quentin prison, expects to make his living as a composer of popular songs.

Six years in prison on a robbery charge gave him the time and the opportunity to develop a talent that was just beginning to appear at the time of his conviction.

After his regular duties in San Quentin were performed, including that of learning the trade of dental apprentice, Malone put in his entire time writing lyrics and composing melodies. The writing of lyrics is easy for him and the creation of tunes almost as easy, except that he has need of an assistant to transcribe them in musical notes, as he does not know a note of music.

During his six years in San Quentin, Malone constantly had the assistance of Henry Cowell, a musician serving a term on a morals charge, as well as that of Frederick Paul, editor of the Sports News, published in the prison, and Don Lucas. The two later usually served as his "musical amanuenses."

Malone has had all of his prison compositions copyrighted. In addition to his songs, he has composed a number of fox trots and waltzes.

Among the copyrighted songs that he has written are: "Wally Dine"—inspired when the blue chosen by the Duchess of Windsor for her tulle gown became the lad in this country, "Deliver Me From You," "Any Irish Song," "Bring Back Love Alive," "I'm Tetched in the Haid 'Bout You," "When Stars Kiss My Hill Top Heaven" and "When Your Sugar Sals You Down."

COFFIN IN TREE BARED AS MYTH

Water Tank, in Role of Casket, Gained Astonishing Fame in Louisiana.

JEANERETTE, La.—Loss of the legend of the "tree-top burial ground" brought little change in the placid life of the Teche country, where a supplementary wealth of Evangeline lore was available, but there was reason for embarrassment to professional guides. The "coffin" resting in the crotch of a moss-draped oak, turned out to be nothing more than a tank that was part of a forgotten water-pumping system. Its purpose forgotten as the years rolled by in the sleepy land of South Louisiana.

The tank, in its role of casket, had gained astonishing fame. It presented a mysterious appearance ensconced in the branches of a Bayou Teche bank oak, and was easily seen from the tourist-traveled Jeanerette-Lafayette highway. It had been pointed out numerous times as a casket and as such was publicized.

The most widely-known story about the "casket" was that it was the last resting place of a man lynched for some deed as fictitious as the "casket," and that it was left there as souvenir and macabre warning to others of his race. Other stories, one planning an Indian custom of "burial" in tree-tops, and the death wish of an eccentric planter who desired above all else to sleep a long sleep high in the air above the Teche.

It's Odd But It's Science.

NEW YORK (AP)—Rumor, looking for a Jules Verne victim, has picked on Einstein.

The story spread in France and England. Einstein, his pointed ears, his planning a daring experiment of descending into the deepest parts of the Pacific shortly in a special apparatus he already has constructed. The scientist hopes with stones and other material he will find there to obtain data for a new book on the history of the world.

Einstein's associates here said they were sure no geological work was contemplated and they suggested the submarine device might have been invented earlier in Einstein's career.

The story apparently arose from recent interest of geologists in the bottoms of the oceans. Interest was inspired by the fact that a new device enables them to drill far sized cores out of the sea bottom a mile or more down. With these rocks they are trying to solve the origin of submarine canyons.

The canyons are like those made by surface rivers.

Another possible source of the rumors is Otis Barton's projected diopneuth. This is to be a bathysphere, or steel ball, on wheels, to go down one mile, and he rolled along for some scientific sight-seeing.

The deepest parts of the Pacific are miles below anything man can now reach. Mt. Everest, in one of those Pacific "deeps," would be far submerged.

COUNTY SPLITS GAS TAX FUNDS

18 Townships Share in $16,300 Allocation, First of Year.

Richland county and its 18 townships today had received $16,300 in the first 1938 distribution of gasoline tax funds by the state.

The allocation will be used for repairing the county and township roads which have suffered heavy damage from the unseasonable weather of the past two months.

The county's highway maintenance fund will provide money for the allocation, receiving $10,000 as compared with $6,000 for the townships. Each township will get $250. Checks will be made payable for mailing today at the county auditor's office.

$60,000,000 Pittsburgh Steel Mill Near Completion

MACHINES OF MAGIC SOON TO BE OPERATING

Giant Buildings Go Up Rapidly In 'Valley on a Hill'; Wheels Turn July 1.

(News-Journal Special)

PITTSBURGH—The greatest private construction project now underway in the United States, the $60,000,000 iron works of United States Steel corporation, today is nearing completion.

Only ten months ago there was nothing except trees, grass and ditches where today giant buildings are rising in a "valley on a hill" overlooking the Monongahela river near Clanton, just 15 miles from Pittsburgh.

And in March test steel operations will begin with the entire plant expected to be ready for operation July 1, scarcely more than a year after the first spadeful of dirt was turned.

Model of Efficiency.

When completed, U. S. Steel's newest plant will be the largest sheet, strip and tin plate mill in the east and the most modern in the nation. Everything will be operated by electricity. Science's newest inventions, some being tried out for the first time, will make the plant the most efficient of its kind in the world.

On a strip of land a mile long by a quarter mile wide, in a valley dug by giant shovels out of the top of a hill some 200 feet from the turbulent Monongahela river, some 40 buildings in all are being constructed. Two of them will each be approximately one-half mile long.

Big Figures.

Here are some figures to indicate the immensity of the work which has occupied 4,000 men, working day and night in three eight-hour shifts, keeping some 79 contractors busy:

When the iron works is completed, the staggering total of 6,500,000 tons of earth will have been dug from the ground.

Some 54,292,000 pounds of steel will have gone into construction work.

Fifteen miles of railroad track will run through the plant.

Almost eight miles of sewer system will be built.

An estimated 150,000 cubic yards of concrete will be poured for foundations, plus 9,000,000 pounds of reinforcing steel, and 2,700,000 pounds of anchor bolts, washers and manhole steps.

Science's Latest.

The completed iron works, named after the recently retired president of U. S. Steel, will have an annual capacity output of 1,200,000 tons—600,000 tons of sheet, strip and other light finished steels.

Among its equipment will be science's latest marvels and its most advanced mechanical designs: great cranes which lift 120,000 pounds at a time; an 80-inch hot strip mill, for rolling and squeezing and kneading slabs of steel, each of which will weigh approximately 4,000 pounds; long strips up to 30 inches wide and .0766 of an inch thick; annealing furnaces electrically operated, which can be lifted by overhead cranes from one place to another, and numerous other great electrically-driven machines and electric burning furnaces.

Four thousand men will be employed at the iron works when it is completed. To house them, all-steel houses will be built a short distance from the plant.

"One touch of nature makes the whole world kin," and one touch of ill-nature starts a general fight.

King Carol of Rumania, getting a 99.87 per cent vote of approval, is now as pure as any soap in America.

We get callous about war. It's hard for some people to realize that a Chinaman can get as hungry as an American, and a bayonet wound hurts him as much.

Free Government Group Proposed.

PRESIDENT ERNEST HATCH WILKINS of Oberlin college suggests that it is time to create a League of Democracies, for mutual support and the preservation of free government where it still exists.

This, as a supporter of the idea says, "would be more than an alliance against dictatorial aggression. It would be an enlargement of the Anglo-American understanding idea. It is into such a league that the Geneva organization is now being forced by circumstances." It is at least an interesting idea.

The United States would hardly join the present League of Nations in any form, because of the bitter fight waged over that institution and the unpleasant associations it has for us. Besides, this country is not much of a "joiner" on general principles. We prefer to keep free and untrammelled.

Nevertheless, in an age when fascist states are springing up on all sides, and socialism is definitely established in Russia, covering half of two great continents, it may be time for the free, democratic countries of the world to go into an informal huddle for their mutual interests.

With the United States and the British Commonwealth of Nations at the head of such a group, followed by France, Switzerland, the Scandinavian countries and such of our Central and South American nations as still care for liberty, there would be an imposing group in numbers, wealth and power.

Arctic Warms Up.

RUSSIAN interest in the Arctic region may have practical value as well as importance to scientific research. A Russian news agency says the zone of eternally frozen ground which blankets the top portion of Siberia and Russia is retreating to the north.

The Soviet Academy of Sciences has had an expedition in that region measuring temperatures. It reports warmer ground temperatures than in 1842 when another Russian academician, Middendorf, took them at the same sites. Apparently the last Ice Age is still retreating.

The increase in warmth—or decrease in cold—is said to "exceed one degree" in some spots, but one degree of warming up in nearly 100 years won't turn the Arctic into a temperate zone in time to solve immediate agricultural or other problems.

The Polar party which has just been rescued from a floe is said to have completed one of the most fruitful scientific adventures in the history of Arctic exploration.

Jobs Instead of Children.

IF it were not for immigration from other states, some of our states would be in a bad way. California, especially. According to Dr. Paul Popenoe, director of the Institute of Family Relations in Los Angeles, California cities have the lowest birth rates in America.

In San Francisco, he reports, the "net reproduction rate" is only 46 per cent of the children necessary to take the places of people who die. In Pasadena it is 51 per cent and in Los Angeles 53 per cent.

There may be various reasons for this, but Dr. Popenoe attributes the low reproduction rate chiefly to competition of women with men, which results in fewer marriages and a higher divorce rate.

"Women have a right to compete with men," he concludes, "but the two sexes should not be educated in such a way that they don't know how to do anything else."

He might suggest a course of education that would result either in more marriages or more non-competitive jobs.

Japanese-American Pact.

RATHER surprising is the news that there is a popular movement in Japan favorable to an anti-war compact with the United States. Within the past couple of weeks a great mass-meeting in Tokyo cheered such a suggestion, put forward by a member of parliament, for "closer ties between the two nations, to contribute to the peace of the world and the welfare of mankind." It was spoken of as a "Japanese-American friendship meeting" and the proposals were loudly cheered by an audience of 10,000 people. Similar meetings are to be held in other large cities.

This movement is supposed to be engineered by the government, and so will naturally be discounted in America. There need be little doubt, though, that the Japanese people feel genuinely friendly toward the American people, whatever may be the inward sentiments of the army leaders and Regulating Indoor Weather.

THE TERM "air conditioning" has been used in so many different senses that a better business bureau has found it necessary to provide a definition. It is a double one, thus: "Winter air conditioning means heating, humidifying, cleaning and circulating the air. Summer air conditioning means cooling, dehumidifying, cleaning and circulating the air."

This definition might be further improved by using the word "moistening" for "humidifying" and "drying" for "dehumidifying." Our technical terms tend to become too long; simple words are usually better.

Basically the whole thing is rather simple, being little more than a matter of providing the proper degree of heat and moisture. And the mechanism for it is growing simple and inexpensive.

It is estimated that 90 per cent of Michigan's farm families have automobiles—indicating that in Michigan, at least, farmers are "going to town."

New Dealers apparently believe that, since passing of the horse-and-buggy days there is no such word as "whoa."

McNutt 'Boom' Party In Capital Called a 'Dud'

—By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON — Washington politicians' practically unanimous verdict (and there are some pretty capable and experienced politicians here on an average) is that the campaign of Philippine High Commissioner Paul V. McNutt for the Democratic presidential nomination is overly obvious.

In fact, it is spoken of as verging on the ridiculous, which is about the worst imaginable thing for a presidential candidacy. This may not be exclusively Commissioner McNutt's own fault. His friends appear to have done their part toward exaggerating him, perhaps without his personal sanction. It is a queer mistake for them to have made, however, considering how politically astute Hoover partisanship is supposed to be. Or maybe it is only Hoover Republicanism that is so astute. Possibly the Democratic faction is less so.

FOOLISH MOVES? McNutt cannot entirely blame his Indiana managers, either. He made a foolish play at Manila, when he insisted that toasts, at Philippine banquets, must be given to him first, ahead of Philippine President Quezon. Regardless of technique, the difference did not amount to much. He made himself look silly by raising the issue.

Then he came streaking back to the United States, to report to President Roosevelt upon Philippine issues which the president evidently considers not a bit urgent—for he made no haste to meet the commissioner.

OVERESTIMATED? Briefly, it looks as if Mr. McNutt had overestimated his importance.

His publicity has been awful also. Emphasis has been laid upon the detail that he is handsome. What has that got to do with his presidential qualifications?

He is not well known in Washington, even though he was governor of Indiana and developed a high-powered political machine there. He has been badly managed presidentially.

I'd guess that he is out of the presidential running.

Turn Your Face So I Can See You

My baby's gone. It's going to be hard to write this. For years we'd had one of those quiet, behind-scenes friendships which sometimes come to columnists. At first, just a brief word of sympathy during a bit of rough going. Then, as time passed, those penny postal cards which were so peculiarly his—"Scotch telegrams" he called them—with O. O. McIntyre scribbled in red ink. Sometimes a longer letter. But always the same essence of gentle friendliness. . . . the same power to push the unessentials aside and reach his kind and constant hand out to the other spirit.

And now he's gone. So quickly. But as he would have wished it. With "his girl" beside him. . . . the only girl he ever had. . . . that beloved Maybelle. . . . who loved and married when they both were young. A little weariness. . . . a sudden dark. . . . and then his whisper:

"Turn your face toward me, dear, so I can see you."

And that was all. And always that had been all. Through all his life. . . . there lay the secret of his strange and heart-deep power, in those ten words. . . . "Turn your face toward me so I can see you."

Forget all that foolish flim-flam. . . . Turn your face—so I can see you as you are!

"Give me your self. . . . your honest, inside self. . . . Give me the hidden, simple beauty that lies in you. . . . and the secret charm and power."

This he said to everyone he met. It might be a "scrubby hovel" under Brooklyn Bridge or a hectic home in some night club, or "Little Italy" . . . with 65-cent spaghetti and "red ink" dinners. . . . Bakery windows with three-foot-long loaves. . . . religious ornate shops. . . . whatever he saw, pushing aside pretense and personalities, Old said:

"Turn your face so I can see you. . . . so I can see you as you really are."

And to people—to sad and discouraged people, to bad and hypocritical people, to defiled and desperate people—that, too, was what he said. Gently. . . . whimsically. . . . with a smile that broke down all barriers and took away all sting. . . . gently, understandingly he said, in unwritten words:

"Turn your face so I can see you. Forget what has happened in these wicked, crippled years. Forget these stately and artificial habits you have acquired, and the shameful things you have done. Forget it all. . . . and let us be boys and girls together, walking, hand in hand, down the gay and curious byways of life. . . . opening our hearts, as we opened them so long ago, to the simple things. . . . to the homely babble of little streets and the many persons believe they will be carried away by a given disease merely because one of their parents or grandparents had it. This is an unnecessary mental burden to carry.

The fact is, a good many persons have deprived themselves of needed medical attention because they feared they might find themselves victims of hereditary disease. This foolish practice has suffered a great deal of unnecessary suffering. Indeed, serious complications have occurred which otherwise would have been prevented.

Can't Be Ignored. Of course, I do not mean to imply that hereditary and hereditary disease must be ignored. But we must be sensible about these things. If a certain disease has existed in your family for many generations, it is well that you be familiar with its fact. But this does not mean that you are doomed. Bear in mind that many of the disturbances to which our forefathers succumbed were little understood and often erroneously diagnosed.

It is a well known fact that persons who are afflicted with

Keeping Step

Are We All Befuddled?

—By LESLIE EICHEL

ARE CRITICS CORRECT? That is a question agitating the theater-going public now in New York.

The cause of the dispute is S. N. Behrman's latest play, "Wine of Choice." This Theater Guild production is not wanting for business. Even in its long try-out period, with much rewriting and cast changes, it attracted better than ordinary business. Yet, there is no exception to the opinion of the newspaper critics—it is not a play.

Behrman, since his "The Second Man" ten years ago (also a Theater Guild production) has been the American dramatist with the most literate stage thought. His lines express the opinions of characters alive to the opposing thought and creeds of this era—and express those opinions in a dramatic, often tense, manner.

Yet, because his plays do lack in "story" or "plot" or "situation," the critics have begun to dismiss them as "talky," "neural," "negative," "getting nowhere."

But audiences seem to enjoy Behrman's plays. They seem to sense dramatic conflict in the battle of opinions. They see drama in the development of character under stress, in the words that go forth to battle.

Then, why the cavil of the critics?

A CRITIC'S FUNCTION It is of course axiomatic that a critic must not judge by mass reaction. He must seek the truth, must gauge upon the basis of a work of art.

Behrman stage plays do not attract the mass. (His movie plots may.) They attract the "upper crust." And the "upper crust" approves.

Thus we have the anomaly of neither mass nor critics approving, but a substantial approval by the "upper crust" which often is pitilessly portrayed by the dramatist.

There is none of us but is flattered at seeing himself mirrored, no matter what the mirror may picture.

SOUND THOUGHT Critics have yawned over Behrman's words in "Wine of Choice." Yet, as I sat in the theater the night I attended and observed the audience, there was no yawning among the people there. They sat intent, laughed and applauded.

For the dramatist seemed to be voicing some important thoughts that other people merely had been thinking.

Can it not be possible—the dramatist seemed to be arguing through his characters—that we of today who have our ideological of a strain to adapt ourselves to them. We need to keep making adjustments to these new conditions. Flexibility of adaptability is increasingly important. Yet in some particulars our economic structure is becoming more rigid.

In an age when it should be able to yield to growing stresses and strains, we are not finding ways to make it more flexible.

There are many aspects of this and one of the most important is the huge volume of debt. Some of our railroads were so heavily financed through bond issues that they have been forced into bankruptcy by the depression. Many of our cities and states have been badly caught in the last few years because their debts were large and currying charges on these debts took a large fraction of their tax income. When their tax receipts diminished they had to meet running expenses out of sharply reduced revenues or else default on debt servicing. Unfortunately, some have met their problems by borrowing still more.

Illustrations could be multiplied but we are here concerned primarily with real estate. Real estate is peculiarly a non-liquid asset. Taxes on real estate are the chief source of revenue for local governments. If real estate is burdened with heavy mortgage debt there are perils both for the owners and for local governments.

Unfortunately, we do not yet know how to prevent business depressions. We have had them in the past and may expect to have them in the future. When the next one comes, it will reduce the incomes of all or nearly all of us, including wage-earners, the owners of small homes. Nothing seems more probable than that many of them will default on their mortgage payments and that they will have difficulty with their taxes.

Of course the insurance of these mortgages through the FHA will protect the financial institutions that have made the loans, but this is merely shifting the losses. If the owners of the real estate cannot pay, then the government through the FHA will do so. There is much to be said for this diffusion of losses. The questionable feature is that the general provision for insuring mortgages up to so high a percentage of the value of the properties is that many may be encouraged to assume unduly heavy long term obligations that will place a strain on future incomes that may be unbearable. Then, to protect the mortgages, the resources of the federal government will be drawn upon.

The writer of this column does not object to this governmental assistance as a matter of broad principle. Modern governments so closely as was demanded a century ago. But with our economic system a mixture of public and private enterprise, we are adding to our problems by so greatly increasing debt both public and private. The operation of the Housing Act is presented merely as an illustration. We need more flexibility but are adding to our economic rigidity.

How It Started —By JEAN NEWTON Turning Tail. For fearful retreat, "turning tail" is not a figure of speech. The phrase flows literally, not imaginatively, out of "coward."

This is because "coward" is the Old French coe plus the suffix ard. Another variation of the same word though in strange, carb is quene and both stem from the Latin cando, both!

As a matter of fact, in the English language, "coward" originally meant "short-tailed."

It was so used especially of the hare; also of the dog, which, when scared runs tail curled up, to which latter instance the expression "turning tail" is probably an allusion.

McIntyre's New York Glimpses

—By O. O. MCINTYRE

FIRST nights in the theater inspire columns of space, click the cameras and bring out the curious. But not much is ever said about the last nights. Yet Broadway has a closing or so every week. They are the down-side of the emotional scene.

It is a custom for musical comedies to close the final performance. Pacliacis carrying on! In more opulent troping days the last night meant hurrying to catch a train for the beginning of a tour that might end in San Francisco. The first stop was usually a sleeper jump to Boston.

But a last night these days is the end of the run and the breaking up of many solid friendships. Mrs. Fiske always rushed away from a closing on the verge of hysteria and there are usually misty eyes, firm handclaps and solemn pledges of eternal friendship.

Now and then the star or producer takes a party back stage at which everyone, stage hands, doormen, ushers and vest, participate. The one big happy family stuff with a sprinkle of sobby speeches and perhaps kits for those who have given of loyalty and service.

New York has a brand of ladies who may be definitely typed as Office Women. They have their own outlooks, views and attitudes. To many they are a bit glacial. More than most women they know how to put man in place. Over the phone in casual matters they are cordial enough but when business boils up they seem of a sudden flint.

I think it was the industrialist Thomas Watson who said 80 per cent of the nation's important business is now carried on by efficient women secretaries. Margaret De Hand at the White House is an illustration.

Incidentally, the first to seize upon the office girl as a subject for the comic strip was A. E. Hayward, who from Santa Fe, N. M., still titmies his "Somebody's Stenog." He has drawn it for more than 15 years and it antedates such other excellencies expressing a similar vocational nader as Willie Winkler the Breadwinner and Tillie the Toller.

In a dining place the other evening I had a grand time peering sideways at an Italian count toying with his vast plate of spaghetti. His meal consisted of spaghetti, baked macs and a raw pear—nothing more save of the course the pint of basketed Chianti. There is a definite art in forking a spear of spaghetti, twisting it into the gullet, mauling it and sucking down the frazzled ends at almost a single stroke. Two heaping platefuls thus vanished in gastronomic rhythm.

Another notable trencherman I enjoy watching in action is Gilbert Miller. Ordering a meal is to him, as should be all a sort of highlight of the day. He is interested in every phase of the serving and there is a gustatory relish in each bite. Such gourmets are the delight of high class restaurant men. They fairly beam when they pop in for a meal.

The Great White Way that Renold Wolfe named is, of course, no longer white. Mostly pink and red with overtones of green and yellow. Mazda Lane becomes Neon Place. Ninety per cent of the lighting from Square to Civic is in the newer manner. Broadway, as a result, does not have the squad of spotters whose duties were to roam the board from 8 p. m. until 3 a. m. for dead lights. Although the general effect is brighter, the cost is considerably less.

It has the taint of ballyhoo but if it takes place will be interesting to watch—the rumored professional split-up of Lynn Fontanne and Al. Her success has been accredited largely to her team-up, and, being temperamental, this has irked. They are reported anxious to go it alone and see what happens. There is a great divergence as to which is the superior player—my vote would go to Miss Fontanne—but the Lunt fans are plentiful. The sensible thing would be for both to retire at the peak of their popularity and not fool around with experiments that might be heart-breaking. But actors are not made of that stuff.

Some sly humor ticked away behind those awesome uniforms of the grandiose doormen. I greeted one in front of a French cafe with a "Bon jour." When I departed he slammed the taxi door and called: "Good night, Frenchy."

CZECHS GIVEN SHARP WARNING BY NAZI LEADER

Goering, 'In Addressing Air Force, Says German 'Rights' Must Be Honored.

(By International News Service) BERLIN—A sharp warning to Czechoslovakia to honor the rights of Germans within its borders was sounded by Field Marshal Hermann Wilhelm Goering today.

Addressing leading members of the air force which he commands on the third anniversary of its establishment, Goering spoke of Reichstuehrer Adolf Hitler's warning that Germany will not permit its nationals in other lands to be maltreated.

"You know," he said, "that if it is to be, you will have to stand by for the future's orders to the last."

"We are proud that the fuhrer has taken over supreme command of the air force, and we are bound to be ready for action at all times."

"Certain of Victory." "We members of the air force are imbued with a tremendous will to fight and are certain of victory in emergency. We have to thank the fuhrer for our readiness and we can prove to the nation and to all our foes that we are invincible."

"In any future conflict, we will become the terror of our enemies. We will not shrink from anything. It is the fault of other nations that we are strong and unconquerable today. The fault is not Germany's. No results were achieved in any negotiations designed to restrict aerial weapons to purely defensive arms."

"The German air force is a guarantor of German peace, but we must confess its strength is terrific. If ordered to act, we swear we shall inflict fear in the hearts of our enemies. We will not shrink from anyone."

"With my 11 years old son men with me to go to great deeds. Our air force now is not an instrument for peace, but a weapon of war. We have created this instrument to render impossible any infringement of German rights."

Hitler was present during Goering's impassioned address. Before Goering spoke, the field marshal's baton awarded during the governmental and army shake-up of February 4 which placed Hitler in supreme command of all defense forces and made Goering his first deputy.

"It was three years ago today that Hitler struck off one of the remaining shackles of the Versailles treaty and launched creation of an air force designed to become second to none in Europe."

'Big Apple' To Be One of Highlights In N. T. G. Show

The dance craze of the year has a featured spot on the program of N. T. G. Graulund's newest girl show, "Glamour Girls of 1938," which appears at the Madison Square Garden tomorrow night. It is the inspiration for a contest which will be held in connection with the two evening shows.

N. T. G. stages its Big Apple dance with the boys and girls of South Carolina who are said to have originated many of the steps, such as the Suez G, the Stomp and the Shag. The contest is open to anyone in the audience who will go up on the stage and take instructions. Competition however, is limited to Mansfield people, and couples getting in the best steps, the N. T. G. show this season includes magazine cover girls, artists' models and state beauty contest winners. One act is a display of some of the famous Ziegfeld costumes, once worn by the girls who made Ziegfeld history.

Four stage shows will be given tomorrow, along with a picture feature.

Louis Posner, former member of the board of education in New York City and a close friend of the Levine's, entered the case with an offer to deal as intermediary with the kidnaper.

"I stand ready to do anything and everything," Posner said. "I can say that if anyone desires to get in touch with me, he may do so with a sense of freedom and security."

The kidnaper was reported to have demanded $60,000 ransom in a note left under a rock in the yard of a vacant house near the Levine's 12-room home but Levine indicated that it would be entirely impossible to raise any such amount even if all his friends came to his assistance.

Today to the many angles of the case was added belief of some friends of the family that Peter might not have been kidnapped at all. The boy was described as a frequent reader of detective story magazines and keenly interested in G-men stories and these friends saw in this pursuit some slight basis for belief that the lad might have staged his own "kidnaping" for a thrill.

Only late last night, Levine's wife, Minnie, and their 10-year-old daughter Helen, kept vigil beside the telephone waiting for a message that apparently did not come.

County Officials Still 'In Dark' About Relief After Licking County Visit.

Richland county commissioners and Auditor Norman L. Wolfe were back today from a visit with Licking county relief officials still "in the dark" about what to do about the relief situation here.

The commissioners and auditor, who went to Newark yesterday in search of a solution to the problem in Richland county, learned, however, that the Licking county relief fund is lighter because more men there are working on WPA projects.

"With about the same population as we have here, Licking county is getting virtually the same help from the state that we are, but the commissioners there can make the money go farther because of the help from WPA," C. L. Mitchell, chairman of the board of commissioners, pointed out.

He added "something will have to be done to cut the expenses here, but we don't know yet what it is."

Wolfe said there may be some funds available from a $23,000 allocation from the state for relief bond retirement, but pointed out that even though the county funds $10,000 for paying January bills, it will still have nearly $25,000 in February bills to meet.

The county's only funds for relief relief come from a $5,500 allocation monthly from the state under a $6,500,000 program set up in January.

Carried Payroll Believed to Amount to $30,000.

MANILA—(AP)—Mystery today surrounded the disappearance of a payroll-laden plane between Manila and Paracale, 120 miles southeast of here.

Philippine Aerial Taxi company officials admitted the payroll was on board but declined to amplify the statement. Other sources said 60,000 pesos ($30,000) was being shipped by air express to pay gold miners.

Company officials theorized Hall had been forced down along Lamon bay. Twenty-three planes, hampered by thick fog and rain, returned without stopping.

JURY TRIAL ON DRIVING CHARGE STARTS TODAY

Panel of 10 Men and 2 Women Hears Case in Muny Court; 25 Witnesses Called.

In the first case to be heard by jury in municipal court in nearly a year Glenn E. Rose, 36, of 57 Howard street, went on trial on a charge of operating a motor vehicle while under the influence of alcohol.

Most of the morning was spent seating the jury and when Judge G. E. Kalbfleisch adjourned court at noon testimony of one of the 25 witnesses subpoenaed, had been taken by the panel of 10 men and two women, although a part of the prosecuting witness' testimony, Lawrence R. Allison, 148 West Third street, had been taken.

The jury seated from the venire after eight persons had been dismissed were Samuel Anderson, 231 Euclid avenue; Irvin S. Eller, 41 Washington avenue; James Chapin, 124 West First street; Clyde Pittman, 120 Woodland avenue; Albert Stodd, 10 East Third street; C. N. Blackman, 29 Arthur avenue.

On the objection from the defense attorney James W. Will, that Mrs. Janet Launier, 81 Vennum avenue, had served as a witness on a jury in the past year, she was excused by the court.

Three Challenged By State.

Three challenged by the state and dismissed were George Kern, 12 Glenwood Heights; James Zimmerman, 189 Cline avenue, and N. E. Denzler, 760 West Fourth street.

Those dismissed after fourth jury challenge by the defense were Mildred Hawley, 137 Sturges avenue; Mrs. Harriette Wilson, 1 Dorian court; Herman Mayberry, 45 Baldwin avenue; L. A. Cook, 530 Bowman street.

The first witness called was William G. Schwan, 82½ North Main street, the photographer who took the pictures at the scene of the accident which occurred Feb. 15 on route 39, about one mile south of Shelby in which Rose and Allison figured.

Allison, driving a tractor and trailer for the Michigan Motor Freight company of Detroit loaded with steel and the car driven by Rose collided on the highway.

State patrolmen were called and brought Rose to the Mansfield police station where charges were filed by Allison. Rose was later released on bond.

Among the state witnesses are Dr. Herman Gunn, of Ashland, who took an alcohol test of Rose's blood the night of the accident.

—Advice—
Age Difference
Makes Widow
Ask Questions

By VIRGINIA LEE
"DEAR MISS LEE: I am a widow 53 years old. I have a car, a house and a little money. I am keeping company with a man 15 years younger than me. I don't know, do you think the age has anything to do with it? I like him and he likes me very much. He is a married man but he does not live with his wife. Will you please give me advice? I would appreciate it very much."
"A READER."
I'm afraid I am not very favorably inclined to such a match, my dear Reader. A man of 38 is not usually attracted to a woman of 53, no matter how young looking she is. If he does court her seriously one can't help thinking the attraction is not entirely disinterested. The fact that you have a car, a home and some money may have a great deal of weight with him.
This isn't very flattering, I know, but better face disagreeable facts now than marry the man and learn that his aims were mercenary. My advice would be that you check this man very thoroughly before taking him seriously. Why could not his wife live with him? Do you know her, and what type of woman she is?
How About Future?
Another thing, even if he is genuinely attracted to you now, how will it be 10 years hence, when he will only be 48 and you 63? I certainly do not envy you if you decide to marry him. A wife so much older than her husband can hardly help being jealous and distrustful of her hold over him.
Some men prefer wives older than they when they are the type of men who want a mother rather than a wife. It may be so with your friend. And then, of course, he may not realize the difference in your ages now. Women in their early fifties often look about 40. But while there is no reason why you cannot enjoy the man's company for a while, I would not advise you to consider marriage unless you are very sure he really loves you. Even then I think I'd decline to enter into such a union. All the statistics on such marriages are discouraging. One occasionally does work out, of course, but they are few and far between.

An effective sandwich for afternoon tea is made by cutting thin slices of white bread and spreading with cheese filling. Roll up and wrap in waxed paper. When ready to serve, cut each roll into 1/2-inch slices. Arrange flat on a serving platter. Other fillings can be used in place of the cheese.
When whipping cream for desserts or salads add three marshmallows cut in four pieces each to a half-pint of cream and whip until the desired stiffness is obtained. The marshmallows will whip into the cream and you will find it much lighter and fluffier as well as having a fine flavor.

A PHYSICS AXIOM
It is an axiom of physics that two things cannot occupy the same space at the same time. That is the principle on which squeeze plays work. If it is a player's turn to discard on a certain trick, he is out of luck in case he needs one of his cards to guard against one of the same suit held by the enemy, and in addition needs two or more others to protect the bottom card of a rival combination. Either discard will wreck him.

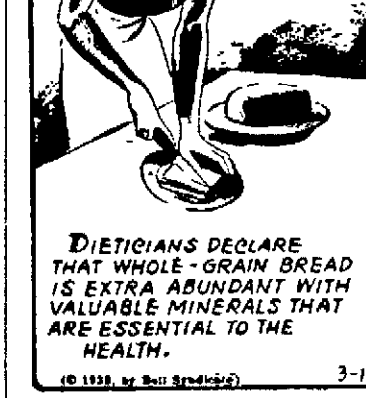

(Dealer: North. Neither side vulnerable.)
On this deal the bidding was opened by North with 1-Spade. South jumped to 2-No Trumps. North to 4-No Trumps and South to 6-No Trumps.
West started the defense by leading the club Q, which was won with the K. The spades K and Q were now cashed, and it was evident to declare that he could not hope to set up that suit. He therefore decided to try to pick up an extra trick in the diamond suit, so immediately tried the diamond J. When this worked, he laid down the diamond A. From West's discards it was apparent that he was trying to protect hearts, so the declarer decided to squeeze one more card out of that hand by playing a low spade and allowing East to win it. East returned another diamond, which South won with the K. A heart was now led to the Q and the spade A cashed. Next came the club 4 to the A. To the eleventh trick, a heart was led to the A, and as West had held hearts, the club 6 was set up. That trick, followed by the heart K, made the contract.

Cream butter, add sugar gradually and cream well. Add beaten egg yolks. Sift together flour, baking powder, salt and spices, then add citron to this mixture. Add the dry ingredients alternately with the milk and fruit juice to the creamed mixture. Stir in the melted chocolate and finally fold in the stiffly beaten egg whites. Pour into a greased, lined loaf pan and bake in a moderate oven about 45 minutes, or until a tester comes out clean. When cool, cover top with lemon icing.

French Bath Substitute For Tubbing

By GLADYS GLAD
(America's Most Famous Beauty)
TO US WOMEN in this modern era, the daily grind often seems to prove pretty staggering. Usually, after an average working day, we feel as wilted and limp as an overworked starched collar, and feel the need of a refreshing shower or bath in the evening. Some women are mum in favor of showers, but for French bathing purposes, because they feel that the stinging spray has a more rejuvenating effect.

Often, however, this daily ritual is a good deal harder to take a bath and dress between their social engagements. They haven't sufficient time to take a really thorough cleansing bath, and as a result, they usually wind up feeling cross and dirty, and out of sorts with the world at large.
The best thing I can advocate for such a girl is the French bath. This is effective in cleansing, cooling and refreshing the body, and what's more, it's the skin a most delightful fragrance.
If you feel tired and worn after working all day, and have an important date in the evening, try one of these baths. First, strip, then take a large bath towel and a bottle of toilet water or eau-de-cologne, soak the towel with it liberally and bathe your body. There are special toilet waters and eau-de-colognes now on the market made especially for this purpose. Some of them are called "skin perfumes," and they are really most effective. Pat your skin briskly at this time, in order to stimulate your circulation. This will not only cleanse your skin, but will greatly cool and refresh your body. Then slip on fresh undies, and another dress, apply your make-up, arrange your coiffure and—in no time at all, you're a fresh, brand new replica of yourself.

Two Families In One House Have Problem

By EMILY POST
Dear Mrs. Post: Due to the "recession," we had to give up our house and move in with my husband's family. They and we both needed each other to pull through financially, although I don't know what will be left of happiness for any of us unless something can be found to adjust the situation. We simply moved in and scattered our own furniture wherever there was a place throughout the house. And now no room seems to belong to any one.
We have a great many friends and our two children have plenty of young people who run in and out just as they always did when we lived in our own house. But, clutter and card-playing of our friends is not especially interesting to my mother and father-in-law. Also the children disturb them.
I know you have suggested turning an ordinary bedroom into a living room-bedroom, but Mrs. Post, this does not help us because the house is small and the bedrooms proportionately so, and in their rooms and our big double beds can not be made to look like anything else, and we have no money for refurbishing. It sounds hopeless, doesn't it, but you have let yourself in for this because you have tackled other problems that seemed just as unanswerable to me.

Answer: Since you have all the furniture that once filled your house, surely you must have some living room furniture with which you can perhaps refurnish the dining room into a living room for your own family. And then use a table, not really a dining room one, and eat in the living room, or else if possible, out in the hall. Two card tables put together would be perfectly practical, easy to fold up and put away between meals. If I were doing it, I should build a wall into the door frame between the living room and dining room.
Either paint this yourself to match the walls of both rooms; or if the walls are papered and there are some rolls of paper left over, you could put this on. Furnish the dining room entirely with your furniture, leave the living room as it used to be, and perhaps one of the children's rooms could be rearranged to look as much like a little sitting room as possible, which they could use. In other words, the problem does not seem at all hopeless to me. Instead of leaving your furniture scattered through the house, you collect it together and make the dining room habitable.

Marriage Meddlers

Continuation of "Married Comrades"

It seemed an eternity before Philip Veritzen answered me, although really his palpable hesitation lasted but the fraction of a second. But for that infinitesimal period of time, my nerves and I knew Mary's as well, tautened almost to the breaking point. Would he permit Miss Whitlock to occupy one of the rooms of the floor he had commandeered for vacancy upon the plea of insuring us privacy, or would he refuse and sharpen the vague fears of some hidden, perhaps sinister purpose of his which had come to me when the hotel manager first told me of the stipulation which the elder Veritzen had made?
Then his voice sounded again in my ears, suave, unctuous, genial, and my nerve tension relaxed with his first words.
"Why! of course, my dear Child! Please let me speak to Milner at once. It seems absurd, of course, that he should not have granted your request immediately, but, not dreaming that you would wish anyone else upon the floor, I gave him very strict orders, which I shall change for this one instance as soon as I can speak to him."

Reverses Order.
"I will get him to the telephone at once," I said, rising, and beckoning Mr. Milner to the desk holding the instrument. He came with alacrity and fairly beamed as he listened to Philip Veritzen's instructions. I surmised that he had not relished the necessity of refusing a guest a reasonable request, and was glad of the opportunity to oblige me.
"Of course, Mr. Veritzen, I will attend to it at once. But you realize my position, I hope. I had such explicit orders from you. Yes, I am listening."
There was a long minute of silence at our end of the receiver, and I wondered what new instructions Mr. Veritzen was giving him. I felt a minor recurrence of the vague fears which had come to me when I first heard of our entire floor cleared of all occupants save those sponsored by the great producer.
"Yes, Mr. Veritzen," the hotel manager said at last. "I understand perfectly. I will have the carpenter attend to it at once."
The word "carpenter" aroused a responsive chord in my brain, and I made a hasty request of Mr. Milner.
"Don't let him hang up," I said breathlessly. "There is something else I wish you to ask him."
He spoke into the transmitter unhurriedly.
"Please hold the line a second," he said, then covered the transmitter with his hand.
"I wish bolts with chains put on the outside doors of Miss Whitlock's room and this suite," I said. "I thought Mrs. Graham had another request to make which might need your authority, but it was only a trivial routine matter to which I can attend."
"Yes, I understand, and will do everything possible to gratify her," he hung up the telephone upon the word, and turned to me, smiling affably.
"You are to be a privileged lady at the Lausfield, Mrs. Graham," he said. "Mr. Veritzen has instructed me that your slightest wish and that of Mrs. Veritzen are to be gratified."
I took hold of my courage with both hands.
"Then," I said, "will you gratify a peculiarly flagrant bit of feminine curiosity, and tell me what arrangements you have made?"

Good Entertainment.
As entertaining a picture as you'll find in months is "Yank at Oxford," which the Ohio is showing. The story is typically American, and there is real thrill when an American college boy strokes the Oxford crew to victory over its ancient enemy, Cambridge. There is opportunity for an interesting comparison between the college boys of America and those of England, while the chimes of old Oxford, heard on the screen for the first time, provide a thrill of their own. The great halls of Oxford and the hazing that the men give the brash young middle western American, the love story between him and the lovely English girl, make for good entertainment. Robert Taylor, Laurence O'Sullivan and Lionel Barrymore head the American half of the cast.
Kid Comes Back.
Wayne Morris, who made a hit when he made his first screen appearance with Edward G. Robinson and Betty Davis in "Kid Galahad," and followed it up with another in "Submarine D-1," makes his third appearance in "The Kid Comes Back." The story revolves around a cowboy who is stranded in New York City after the Western rodeo is staged at Madison Square Garden. His

THEATER

The premieres which used to draw the attention of the entire country to Hollywood, aren't what they used to be. One of the most extravagant of recent times was that at the Cathay Circle when Goldwyn's "Hurricane" was premiered. It cost $55,000 to stage. But what was $55,000 as compared with the $65,000 that went for the premiere of "Hell's Angels," and long before that for "King of Kings"? When "Hell's Angels" had its opening at Grauman's Chinese theater in Hollywood, the light bill alone was $25,000, what with flood lights strung along the Hollywood hills. But then it was one of the very few films that got away with $10 for seats on the opening night.

G.O.P. LOOKS TO YOUTH TO HELP SOLVE PROBLEM

Keep Voters of 21 and 24 Interested, Kansan Tells Program Committee.

(By International News Service)

CHICAGO—The youth of America was looked to today to lead the Republican party out of the doldrums.

As the new program committee of 150 settled down to draft a comeback campaign for the G. O. P., many members openly advised currying the favor of the young electorate above all else.

Henry A. Bobb, of Topeka, Kan., president of the young Republicans, was one of the principal speakers at a banquet last night. He asserted:

"Our biggest problem is to keep the voters between 21 and 24 interested. They may be interested through social or athletic means, through political clubs with sports events, football teams or the like. His opinion was echoed by Dr. Harold W. Dadds, president of Princeton university, who said:

"I hope this committee will frankly consider the future popular government of the United States is going to be determined by people under 40, many 30."

Fran Ralph E. Flanders, a Vermont manufacturer, came the remainder.

"One disturbing thought is that the average age of the Republican party is above the average age of the nation. The party has belonged to the middle aged. We must recapture the ideals of youth."

Study Youth Campaign.

The mechanics of making a bid to recapture the Republican party's dominance will be taken up at executive sessions of the committee today. It was decided to work along three lines, suggested by Dr. Glenn Frank, the group chairman.

A clear and comprehensive audit of the new deal is to be undertaken along with a straightforward statement of G. O. P. political and economic philosophy. As the third step, the committee intends to make its own independent answer to such problems as unemployment, agriculture, business, foreign policy and taxation. By putting one against the other, it was hoped an effective platform could be evolved for the party either at the congressional elections next fall or the presidential campaign in 1940.

As for possible marriage plans, Caruso could say nothing.

He revealed that the orchestra conductor, former leader of the Philadelphia Philharmonic, who was won over to Hollywood, left Ravello five days ago and went to Rome, where he met Miss Garbo.

She had slipped out of Sweden and came to Italy by way of Munich, Germany.

The hotel keeper also revealed that the Italian orchestra leader, Massimo Freccia, sent a telegram to Stokowski asking to see the film maestro in Rome, but so far Stokowski has not even replied.

This was taken as indication that he wants to maintain an absolute incognito.

He does not want even his closest friends to know his whereabouts, it was understood.

JUDGE ORDERS UNIQUE PENALTY

Sentences Speedier to Spend One Hour Each Month in Court.

CLEVELAND — (AP) — Steve Czelego, 35, today had a unique monthly date on his calendar for the next six months.

He must sit one hour each month in traffic court as penalty for speeding 62 miles an hour on Cleveland streets to take two passengers to the bedside of a dying relative.

Judge Julius Kovachy, pronouncing the sentence, said:

"I know you feel you were doing right but I don't think you should go unpunished. If you sit an hour once a month in traffic court, you'll realize that your traffic violations were matters of life and death."

REFUSES FREE VACCINATIONS

Health Commissioner Says 60 Knox Pupils in Richland Schools Non-residents.

The Knox county health board was scheduled to act today on the vaccination of about 60 pupils in rural schools in Pike township, Knox county, who have been the center of a dispute between Richland county school heads and health officials.

The pupils, who live in Knox county and attend school there, belong to the Richland school district, but because of their non-residence, health officials here refused to provide free vaccination for them against smallpox.

Although County Prosecutor Glenn W. Maitott said the children were eligible to receive vaccination as any other pupils in the county, Dr. Roy C. Rehder, county health commissioner, declined to order vaccination.

"As near as I can learn, these pupils are legal residents of Knox county and any action regarding immunization program should be taken there," Dr. Rehder said.

"It is true that parents of the pupils pay school taxes in Richland county, but that money is for school operation and has nothing to do with a health program independent of the schools," he added.

There has been no county-wide vaccination of school children against smallpox in Knox county, and Dr. Rehder said Worthington township school officials had asked for vaccination of the Knox county pupils in the Worthington school district.

The pupils attend the Arnold and Liberty schools in Pike township, near the Richland county line.

'POLITICS' FAIL

Fund Solicitor Fined, Given 60 Days in Jail.

A Columbus man who said he "dabbled in politics" will have to depend on politics to get him out of jail, Judge C. E. Kalbfleisch told him yesterday when he pleaded guilty to a charge of obtaining money under false pretenses.

O. V. Cooper, colored, told the judge he was guilty of soliciting funds allegedly for the Mount Calvary Baptist church, without authority but that he was "quite a politician" in Columbus.

"If politics got you into this, it will have to get you out of jail, too," Judge Kalbfleisch said "Sixty days and twenty dollars."

Charges were filed by Rev. A. J. McGarry, pastor of the Mount Calvary church, 343 North Main street, who testified that the man had fleeced numerous persons of small amounts of money in the past week.

For miles crowds surged against the guard ropes to see the king lead a score of floats past the staid Boston club and the city hall—for a champagne toast to his queen and the mayor.

EXTENSION OF GRAFT INQUIRY UP TO HOUSE

Decides Today On Davey's Appeal to End Session And 'Unjust' Probe.

committee to be bewildered."

The report said the federal government had permitted the waste of federal funds pooled with state funds, and that the United States senate should "launch a searching inquiry."

After listening to a hour-long speech of the governor last night before an estimated 1,400 persons who packed the hall of the house, the representatives voted to defer action until today on the question of continuing the investigation.

Adjournment Actual Issue.

The actual issue was whether a previously adopted resolution, fixing Feb. 28 for sine die adjournment, should be rescinded.

Senator William F. Hurley, Lorain, Democrat, whose 27th district includes Richland county, voted with 13 other Democratic senators last night to continue the assembly's special session to permit the senate investigating committee to continue its work. The total vote was 19 for and 3 against.

and the special session prolonged indefinitely. Sine die adjournment would terminate the investigating committee's existence.

The resolution to continue in session was pushed through the senate late yesterday without a vote to spare on the tenth roll call. The vote was 19 yeas to 3 nays, with eight administration followers present but not voting.

Sen. Verner E. Metcalf of Marietta, Republican floor leader and a member of the inquiry body, said continuation of the investigation would be an "idle gesture" if the legislature did not make funds available to finance it.

Some observers were of the opinion, however, that if the house approved continuation it also would vote funds. The house has failed to concur in a senate bill which would give $40,000 to the investigators.

It was Senator Metcalf who introduced the resolutions demanding the resignations of Highway Director John Jaster, Jr., Liquor Director James W. Miller, Purchasing Agent Glenn A. Horn and Alfred Humphrey, chief of the liquor enforcement division. The resolutions were referred to the rules committee.

Continues Speech.

Governor Davey spoke for 15 minutes over the radio from a prepared speech, and then continued extemporaneously for 42 minutes.

He said that the investigation had produced nothing which "reflects upon any responsible official of the state government, except the slanderous falsehoods of Lee Bradley," who has been charged with perjury.

"It is appalling," the governor told his audience, "to what depths of immorality and depravity political enemies will sometimes go in a desperate effort to destroy the good name of a man in public office."

He predicted "this hypocritical persecution will turn against them like the fiery dragon of outraged justice. They will be the object of contempt of all decent-thinking citizens."

As for himself, Governor Davey said:

"I'm as honest as any person in this room. I yield nothing to my predecessors in integrity. . . no one in Ohio or elsewhere has anything on the governor of Ohio."

He defended members of his official family who have been accused in the investigation testimony of allowing a waste of public funds.

Under Sparks' Ouster.

He said he would instruct highway director Jaster to discharge Harry Sparks, a bituminous engineer who estimated $2,000,000 could have been saved by the highway department in purchases of paving materials in 1936-37.

Sparks was accused by the governor of neglect of duty for not

Sparks Quits With Bitter Blast.

COLUMBUS — (INS) — Harry A. Sparks, bituminous engineer in the state highway department, who was attacked by Governor Davey in his address before the house for his testimony in a senate investigating committee hearing, resigned today.

Sparks, in his letter of resignation said:

"In reference to your intent to instruct John J. Jaster to discharge me from the department, I wish to be understood that you have no position under your control of sufficient value that I might bequeir myself to retain."

Sparks' letter said that he had been informed of the chief executive's extemporaneous speech before the house in which the governor charged "some infractions of department of my departmental duties in that I did not inform Director Jaster of certain practices of his department."

"Jaster, Carl Walker, member of Davey's highway investigating committee, and myself held a three-hour conference at a suburban night club where we would be undisturbed and unknown and Jaster asked who drew up specifications for bituminous concrete paving." Sparks added.

"I answered if he (Mr Jaster) did not know I could not enlighten him."

Sparks charged that Jaster and C. W. Simpson, executive secretary of the Hot Mix Bituminous Paving Industry, Inc., had an agreement under which the price for hot-mix bituminous paving was not to exceed $9 per cubic yard.
